Third sprint review

During the third sprint, most of the things went the same as the last sprint. There wasn't any noticeable improvements since the second sprint but we were carrying on with the same pace, making progress as we were before. We believe we're on schedule even though some of the core functionalities are yet to be implemented, we believe we will be able to finish on time.

There were a few issues faced this sprint as well, for example there wasn't enough stand-up meetings. So, people had to individually ask around to know about the overall progress of the group as each stand-up meeting was carried out after a few days. Even though people tried to communicate online for any progress done at home it wasn't as efficient as it would have been if there were more frequent stand-up meeting carried out.

Furthermore, one other problem was that we decided to make different branches on git for different functionalities but we failed to combine them before the presentation. There would have been less hassle before the presentation if we had done so. Finally, even this sprint group members were unable to come on time every day. The exams was a reason for this including general tardiness.

The things we would like to improve is people coming on time as this is the last sprint and there is not much else to be concerned about except the project sessions for most people as the exams are all done.
